A Very Full Year

It is hard to believe that this will be my last President’s column for Camp Talk, but here I am near the end of my term. It has been a very full year. We have had another very successful convention, another full year of educating both youth and adults, another year of funding conservation projects around the world, and another year of advocating for hunters’ rights. Your club has had some huge accomplishments and further cemented its position as a worldwide conservation leader.

And who made all this possible? Everyone who:

- Showed up to volunteer
- Worked past the end of their shift, staying until the job was done
- Asked, “What can I do to help?”
- When asked where they would like to volunteer said, “Put me where you need me most.”
- Selflessly served by putting the DSC mission first

Thank you from the bottom of my heart for everything that each of you has done to make DSC great. Your wonderful spirit is infectious. It’s why we have Convention Center employees and police officers not just doing their jobs but pitching in on Move-in/Move-out and even joining the club. It’s why we have exhibitors sign up to work volunteer shifts. It’s why new members sign up to volunteer for one shift, and then they stay the whole day and come back to volunteer more the next day.

Over the years, I have gotten a great sense of satisfaction from volunteering and helping the club achieve greatness – sometimes in big ways and sometimes in small ways. It has been my honor to serve you as president this year, and I hope to continue being a useful volunteer to the club for many years to come.

Scott Tobermann, DSC President
Dr. Ken Nelson Wins

DSC’s Dave Baxter Literary Award is presented annually to an amateur writer with a compelling story that has been published in Game Trails or Camp Talk in the past year.

This year’s finalists were:

John Justus
Lion at the Last Minute from Spring Game Trails

Dr. Ken Nelson
Patience Has Its Rewards in Fall Game Trails

Raj S. Paul
The End of the Game in Convention Game Trails

Karen Seginak
Prairie Grouse Promenade in Convention Game Trails

Charles Wolcott
The Raffle Sable in Convention Game Trails

The judging was so close, the winner, Dr. Nelson for Patience Has Its Rewards, was chosen with a tie-breaking vote.

Dr. Nelson expressed the importance of relaying the love of hunting through writing. He also thanked his wife for the great photos that accompanied his article.

The top five were all in attendance at the banquet on January 9, 2020 when the winner was revealed. In fact, two of this year’s finalists were involved in the inaugural award in 2007 when Charles Wolcott presented the first Literary Award to Raj Paul.

Congratulations again to Dr. Nelson and all of the finalists. CT

Excerpt from the Winning Article

At last everyone froze in mid-step. The massive horns that had won many a battle, and no doubt hooked a few lions, now showed the ancient bull's position. Quickly the sticks went up. As he realized something was amiss, the bull took to his feet. His sheer mass at 30 yards cannot adequately be described.

Poaching Declines in South Africa for 5th Straight Year

Rhino deaths recorded from poaching have decreased yet again in South Africa, making it five consecutive years of decline. Similarly, elephant lives lost to poachers are also down from 2018 numbers.

But, the government is not letting up. As the country looks ahead to 2020, the Department of Environment, Forestry and Fisheries plans to proceed with even more initiatives to deter rhino poaching.

Under the leadership of Minister Barbara Creecy, the Department of Environment, Forestry and Fisheries will continue acting by the Integrated Strategic Movement of Rhinoceros, the multi-disciplinary approach, as well as the principles set forth in the draft National Integrated Strategy to Combat Wildlife Trafficking (NISCWT), which came from CITES (Conference of Parties to the Convention on the Illegal Trade in Wild Fauna and Flora) in 2016. It aims to strengthen the multi-disciplinary approach and broaden the scope to combat other wildlife trafficking.

For example, in Kruger National Park alone, there were 2,014 poaching activities and incidents, but only 327 rhinos were lost. This attests to the fast-acting programs and strategies in place for rangers and law enforcement.

Country-wide arrests have resulted in 145 imprisonment rulings with six sentences greater than 15 years, as well as various high-profile cases still presently before the courts.

The number of rhinos lost to poaching is down to 594, which is 175 fewer than 2018. Elephants lost to poaching is down to 31, compared to 71 in 2018.

Scott Jordan Named Educator of the Year

Scott Jordan of Cuba-Rushford Central School (CRCS) in Cuba, New York, was named the 2020 Educator of the Year by the Outdoors Tomorrow Foundation (OTF). The presentation was made during the DSC Convention last January.

“Scott is a great example of what our mission is all about, teaching and modeling outdoor education and promoting wildlife conservation through the Outdoor Adventures program,” said Scot McClure, OTF Education Coordinator. “He is well-loved by his students and his peers, and his passion for the program is contagious.”

Jordan, who is in his 28th year as an educator, teaches 8th grade science in the mornings and the Outdoor Adventures curriculum in the afternoons. “It is quite an honor to receive this award,” Jordan said. “What’s so special about the Outdoor Adventures program for me is the ability for students to learn something in school and immediately be able to go into the field and use it. This award will give my students in the program more of an opportunity to share our class experience and best practices that we’ve worked hard to improve and grow our OA program over the last 23 years.”

Jordan currently has an average of 55-60 students enrolled and estimates more than 3,500 have experienced the class throughout the years. He has also led off-campus trips to New Zealand, Alaska, Florida, Texas, Nebraska, Pennsylvania, South Africa, Australia, Scotland, Ireland and England, Canada, Egypt, Rome, and Greece.

The Outdoor Adventures curriculum also reaches beyond Jordan’s classroom through CRCS Outdoors, a television show that the class produces on the Pursuit Channel, with an average viewership of 217,000.

The Fisheries and Wildlife Technology classes at Cuba-Rushford Central School are designed to provide rural students with the opportunity to study biological organisms in their natural habitats, while utilizing the integration of math, science, and computer technology. This course includes hands-on applications with conservation and research on animals as the primary focus.

The class also features working with professionals from related fields and career development. Research projects include: the Deer Project (capturing, collaring, tagging and tracking whitetail deer), the Turkey Project, the Salmon Project, the CRCS Hatchery (raising paddlefish and trout), the Wildlife Research Center (Log Home), the Deer Research Center (known as Deerasic Park where students conduct scientific research on the rut cycle of whitetail deer), and, new this year, a turkey research facility. The students at CRCS also annually compete in the Environthon. Many of Jordan’s former students have gone on to become leaders in conservation and ecology.

“Recently I have a fisheries biologist intern working in Alaska, a wildlife technician working with endangered and threatened birds in Hawaii, a Turkey Biologist who just finished his master’s in Tennessee, a duck researcher who is now in a master’s program conducting research, and a large mammal biologist in Maine,” Jordan said.

Cuba-Rushford School Assistant Principal Christopher C. Fee recommended Jordan for the honor and expressed his admiration in a nomination letter: “The real-life, hands-on experience that Mr. Jordan gives is second to none. CRCS community is fortunate to have him be an integral part of molding our youth.”

Congratulations once again to a well-deserving award recipient! CT
I recently stumbled across a quote by bowhunter Fred Bear who said, “If you consider an unsuccessful hunt to be a waste of time, then the true meaning of the chase eludes you all together.”

I understand the bigger point that Mr. Bear was trying to make but can we all agree that there is no such thing as an unsuccessful hunt? I can honestly admit that I’ve never had an unsuccessful hunt. I’ve had several where I came home empty-handed, cold, miserable, and exhausted. We all have. But unsuccessful? Hardly.

A week after the 2020 DSC Convention, I took a trip to Natchez, Mississippi for a deer hunt just north of the Adams County line – a trip I’ve made many times over the past 25 years and one for which the invitation is standing. We hunted a property owned by my friend and host, situated along the historic Natchez Trace. Due to various commitments, my yearly ability to take this hunt has ebbed and flowed. The invitation for the 2020 trip was one I was not going to let slip by. My friend suffered a serious health issue in early 2019. I had all kinds of reasons for not checking in on him, but my conduct was inexcusable. So, when my friend texted and simply said. “I’m going next weekend. Are you in?” my immediate response was “What time do you want to leave?”

The weather was as bad as it could be for deer hunting in January in Mississippi. The rut was over. The wind was wrong for almost every favorite spot. The predicted rain came and being the stubborn men that we are, neither of us wanted to be the first one back to the truck, so we both got soaked. We stuck the Ranger in such a ridiculous spot that we looked at each other and simultaneously said “no one is going to believe we did this.”

We immediately fell back into the pattern that we established more than 25 years ago. We were ready when the other was – we were on the same page instinctively as if we had never missed a beat. We talked about his health scare and recovery. We talked about getting old. We drank gin and ate the kind of food that Natchez is famous for. We remembered the early years on Amherst Street in University Park, the turkey hunt when the girls discovered they could buy 30 colors of nail polish at the Natchez Dollar General store for $4, the pickled pigs feet challenge, and the infamous hot dog incident that caused our sons to be kicked off of their BBI baseball team. We reminisced about prior adventures with our children over the years, and the amazing adults that all six of them have become.

I felt the soft cushion of pine straw-carpeted forest floor under my feet and inhaled the rich earthy smell of hardwood detritus. I walked the ridge tops and the sandy bottoms. I got that same eerie tingling on the back of my neck walking down centuries-old logging roads in the darkest of dark pre-dawn hours that I felt so many decades earlier. For a few days, I felt my Deep South roots come alive.

We saw deer despite the conditions, and we hunted hard. I experienced everything that that place and moment had to offer with an old friend. We never fired a shot. It was one of the best hunts I’ve ever had.

You have similar stories. Share them with your non-hunting friends even if you never fired a shot. They need to understand why we do what we do, and why it feeds our soul. No one can tell the story better than we can, and if we are going to protect and preserve our hunting heritage, we need to share the blessings of the hunt. CT

Proposed DOI Budget Prioritizes Wildfire Prevention

President Donald Trump proposed a $12.8 billion Fiscal Year (FY) 2021 budget for the Department of the Interior, including a new, innovative $50 million initiative that would begin to transform and build a more stable and permanent wildland firefighting workforce to better align with the challenges of prolonged periods of wildfire activity and the need to more aggressively implement active vegetation management.

Overall, $1 billion is being requested specifically for wildland fire programs to protect Americans and their communities. The President continues to prioritize the health, safety and wellbeing of Americans by investing in the federal wildland fire workforce to implement active vegetation management practices, reduce hazardous fuel loads and suppress active wildfires on public lands.

“In 2019, we treated over 1.4 million acres, but we must recognize that the length of our fire season is getting longer; fires are large; and risks are higher. Therefore, we must innovate to strengthen our wildland fire and active management capability,” said Secretary of the Interior David Bernhardt.

In addition to these highlights, the budget strikes a balance between development and conservation; fulfills trust responsibilities for Alaska Native and Tribal communities; improves visitor experiences at our nation’s natural and historical areas; enables reliable water supplies and delivery to people in the West; and makes strategic investments to increase broadband access in rural areas, critical mineral development and law enforcement.

Topics include:
- Fighting and Reducing Wildfire Risk by Investing in Stronger Fire and Forestry Management Programs
- Protecting Our People and Our Borders by Supporting Law Enforcement and Emergency Response Activities
- Expanding Recreation and Access on Public Lands and Stewarding Conservation
- Facilitating Responsible Energy Resource Management
- Upholding Our Commitments to Indian Country and Insular Areas
- Improving Government Services

For the entire report and more budget information, head to Camp Talk Online for the full release and links.

Clayton Wheat Williams, Jr. passed away surrounded by his loving family on February 14, 2020.

When he wasn’t leading his many real estate and business ventures, Clayton and wife Modesta traveled and hunted all over the world. They loved seeing new countries and the adventures their many travels took them on. Clayton earned the Grand Slam and Super Slam of sheep hunting and loved retelling the stories that went along with each trip.

He also received the Dr. Bob Speegle Outstanding Hunting Achievement Award (OHAA) from DSC in 1999. The award was given to him for his 30 year quest and collection in fair chase of the Wild Sheep of the World: 17 species from 15 countries.

Williams was an Eagle Scout and in his long life, received many awards for his leadership in oil and gas, agriculture and real estate development. He was honored with the A&M Distinguished Alumni Award in 1981, inducted into the Petroleum Museum Hall of Fame in 2005, earned many Lifetime Achievement Awards and was honored to give the Aggie Muster address at A&M in 2005.

Clayton was born October 8, 1931 in the small West Texas town of Alpine, and grew up in nearby Fort Stockton. He graduated from Texas A&M in 1954 with a degree in animal husbandry. He then served two years in the U.S. Army before being honorably discharged.

Clayton took the $5,000 he saved from waiting tables and discharge pay and from scratch, started selling life insurance back in Fort Stockton. Soon after, Clayton entered the oil and gas business as an independent oil lease broker in 1957. From his Coyanosa Oil & Gas discovery, he founded Clajon Gas in 1959 which went on to be the largest individually owned gas company in Texas when he sold it in 1988.

Williams was an industry leader in oil and gas exploration, production and transportation, Brangus cattle, commercial alfalfa operation at Fort Stockton Farms, oilfield services, telecommunications and diversified into banking and real estate. Clayton’s outspoken leadership during Texas’ economic ups and downs earned him respect from his peers.

In 1990, Clayton was the Republican Party’s nominee for Governor of Texas, losing that race to Ann Richards, but continued to support Republican, conservative efforts.

Clayton was married for 55 years to Modesta. He is survived by his wife, five children, nine grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. He leaves behind many nieces, nephews, dear friends and loved ones.

Williams was the very personification of a “tough Texan.” His legacy will be one of tenacity, service, leadership, hard work and ingenuity. CT
